(U//~~FOUO~~) Oath Keepers is a non-profit organization made up of current and former law enforcement and U.S. military members (and their supporters). Group members swear an oath not to obey ten orders which they perceive to be unconstitutional. For instance, members refuse to disarm the American people, conduct warrantless searches, subjugate any state which declares its sovereignty, etc. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED]
[REDACTED] Rhodes
has appeared on several national-level media programs to promote the group.

(U//~~FOUO~~) In 2009, the Southern Poverty Law Center (SPLC) issued a report which compared Oath Keepers to a terrorist/militia group. SPLC and others have suggested that Oath Keepers poses a significant threat, as its members could serve as a "Fifth Column" inside the government, helping to undermine effort to combat domestic terrorism. Rhodes and other group leaders have consistently denied these allegations, stating that the organization is merely trying to encourage constitutional values amongst law enforcement and military organizations.

(U//~~FOUO~~) Despite Rhodes' attempts to distance his group from allegations of criminal activity, various individuals associated with Oath Keepers have engaged in well-publicized criminal acts which appear linked to violence and terrorism. For instance, Charles Dyer, an Oath Keeper from Oklahoma, was charged in January 2010 for possessing a stolen grenade launcher. In May 2010, Darren Huff, an Oath Keeper from Georgia was arrested in Tennessee with an assault rifle, and was enroute to execute 24 citizens arrest warrants for government officials.
